

Re: letter writing

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.newusers/2009-04/msg00191.html>

- From: "Tim Meddick" <timmeddick@xxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 18 Apr 2009 00:13:19 +0100
-

Condescension reaches new heights!

--

Cheers, Tim Meddick, Peckham, London.

"Lil' Dave" <spamyourself@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:eKZIRX6vJHA.2376@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

"mick" <mick@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:B720634D-D7F0-40E7-84D2-9BFD06D32B98@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx im new to computers.please be patient.how do i write a letter using windows xp

Even if I was a 10 year old reading your post, and relating it to a potential letter via USPS, I would suggest some capitalization at the beginning letter of each word leading a sentence and some ending of each sentence with a period. If you can overcome that tremendous handicap, I would suggest Wordpad or even Notepad for simple USPS letters.

Some reading of genuine books and noting the sentence layout may help some. Even MS Word has limitations based on your post for proper sentence structure correction. Sentence structure clarifies meaning of a communication. Of which, communication is the purpose of writing a letter.

I had a hard time with "English" class in the last year of high school almost 40 years ago. But, I don't feel so bad based on what I see today.

--

Dave

April 16th, 2009 Day 1 post Tea Party.

This day in history occurred:

Nancy Pelosi response was undignified per her allegation that such are funded by right wing money big money and attended exclusively by right wing extremists.

Re: letter writing

White House staff indicated that officially not recognizing the nation-wide gatherings in any fashion.

Some news reporters were found attempting to goad responses from attendees at the gatherings with response not filling their (some news reporters) TV political needs. Too bad for them.

Wobama in Mexico. 2nd amendment rights being pinged again. Ignoring locking down the U.S/Mexico border again.

We the people...

No political party or otherwise in that.

Locked signature to prevent subsequent historical revisionism.