

Re: Save Upgrades to Disc

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.perform_maintain/2004-03/1267.html

From: Jason Haynes (jasonlhaynes_at_COLDmail.com)

Date: 03/08/04

Date: Mon, 8 Mar 2004 14:43:23 -0500

Or you could go the easy way and order the free updates cd from Microsoft.

<http://www.microsoft.com/security/protect/default.asp?Locale=en-us>

"Agimat" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:95d901c40542$9b0f2d20$a101280a@phx.gbl...

> hi, are you referring to the updates in the "Windows > Update" site? if you are, here's what i did to save those > update to disk just in case i needed to install/reinstall > winxp:
>
> 1. start windows Update
> 2. after winupdates loads in IE, click on "Personalize > Windows Update" on the left menu
> 3. check "Display the link to the Windows Update Catalog > under See Also", then click "save settings" on the upper > right corner.
> 4. click on "Windows Update catalog" on the left menu
> 5. click on "Find updates for Microsoft Windows operating > systems"
> 6. choose your OS, i.e. Window XP SP1
> 7. click "Search" to get all updates or use "Advanced > Search" and type in the KB or Q number in the box to get > a specific one, since you have a list on what you need > 8. when you get to the results (Crit. Updates, > Recommended Updates, etc.) click "add" on the ones you > need > 9. go to the download basket, browse for a folder on your > disk, like c:\winupdates or something, then click download > 10. after download, each update .exe will be put in it's > own folder, so you have to drill down to a nest of > folders created during the download just to run each > update
>
> good luck, and i hope this helps.
>
> >-----Original Message-----

> >I just recently bought a new computer but have only > recently been able to access the internet. I checked to > see what upgrades I might need. I found that I needed > 21.2 mb of data to be up to date. My BIG problem is I > have a really slow connection and it will take hours upon > hours to download all of the upgrades I need to be safe.
> Is it possible to download the upgrades, here at work and > then save them to disc so I can just take the disc home > and upgrade at home from the disc? I have a list of the > upgrades I need.
> >thank you
> >
> >