

Re: Asp.net & dot.net 2.0

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.perform_maintain/2007-01/msg00571.htm

- From: "Robert Moir" <robspamtrap@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 21 Jan 2007 09:40:08 -0000
-

<*(((< wrote:

Would somebody kindly explain to be the difference between these two.
I occasionally run an application that requires dot.net. Could I set the SERVICE to "Manual" and be okay?

Dot Net is a particular programming and code execution environment. ASP.Net refers to how this is manifested for web server applications.

What service are you referring to? The ASP.Net State Service should already be manual if it isn't being used. If it isn't set to manual, then you need to figure out what changed it and why in order to know whether or not you can set it back to manual.

If you're talking about a different service then what service?

Regards
Rob

.