"Don't use Volume License media to install the initial Microsoft Windows license on a new PC. Microsoft Volume License Agreements offer operating system upgrades only. "

So, what do we do if the OEM copy contains: AOL, Norton, Works, Sonic (no not the hedgehog, the one that knackers XP's CD-writing!) Bonzi Buddy, etc, etc.. ? Are we supposed to run the volume install on top of this foistware?

Or do as I do, and forget volume licensing, just use the OEM license to do a clean install. Cheaper anyway.
