I have several Windows XP machines which are not getting group policy settings from the various domain policies. I have run the various tools– and the resultant set of policy says that the local group policy is being applied after the domain policies. I have manually checked this on 3 PCs– and there are no settings defined in the local group policy. The problem is– the domain settings are not being applied to the PCs either. All the settings seem to be not defined. The policies are all enabled and enforced.
