

microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6.browser: iexplorer.exe has generated errors.....

iexplorer.exe has generated errors.....

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6.browser/2004-02/10370.htm>

---

From: freddyboy77 (fflintstone77_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 02/26/04

Date: 26 Feb 2004 14:37:55 -0800

Immediately after stupidly adding an unknown individual to my Yahoo Instant Messenger friends list, my internet explorer would produce the error message above. I am running Windows 2000 Professional. I tried to use the repair tool to repair what I think was Internet Explorer 5.0. I have since downloaded Internet Explorer 6 SP 1 after removing the IE 5.0. I continue getting the same error message indicated above and then a second window indicating that the necessary libraries needed may be missing or corrupt to locate Yahoo or whatever web sight i was trying to enter. I am still able to access Yahoo by using a link from my History toolbar, but the error message continues to appear anytime I try my Internet Explorer desk top icon and frequently when I link from site to site or search. I have also not been able to use the games functions at Yahoo.

My e-mail seems fine, as is the operations of my Yahoo Instant Messenger. I checked the error message at Microsoft Support, but the fixes they suggest don't apply or work. I have run my Norton Virus protection and Spybot to no avail. I am really frustrated.

Suggestions or assistance greatly appreciated. Fred Flintstone