

What is best to try for a all of a sudden slow browser

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6.browser/2004-06/6671.htm>

---

From: PeterM (P_Maston_at_msn.com)

Date: 06/23/04

Date: Wed, 23 Jun 2004 13:23:00 -0700

I use Win XP Pro, and have all the updates, a PIII w/750 CPU. I use this computer at work, and we use a Ethernet network there. My browser was always pretty fast, and all of a sudden it is crawling. I usually have 6 windows, I input one, and then it goes to the next window. Now I have to wait soooooo long for each window to finish. Is there a program that will help me with finding out what may be the cause of the slowdown. I checked with our center that gets the info that I put into the pages. They have no slowdown, as far as what they can see. We did some pinging and some tracert stuff, but we didn't find anything unusual. I think I probably have a program, that is loading, and it is taking up too much memory or something like that. Is there a way, or a program that could let me unload a program? I tried it with End It All, but forgot, that I probably need to reboot, to see if the program caused the slowdown. Anyway, Any help is appreciated.....Peter