

Re: Regular pointers are being changed by a web site

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6.browser/2004-12/4352.htm>

From: Burt (smokydog_at_damnthespamalaska.net)

Date: 12/30/04

Date: Thu, 30 Dec 2004 10:10:27 -0900

It is unlikely that you can change that behavior.. It is embedded in the code of the website that you are visiting to change the pointer to something of THEIR desire..
HTH,

--

Burt

The Old Alaskan

MVP's listed on TECKPAGE

<http://www.cvinternet.net/~smokydog>

<http://www.cvinternet.net/~smokydog/teckpage.htm>

"A web site changes my mouse pointers" <A web site changes my mouse pointers@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:85923851-6082-4C33-8087-7612E72CD551@microsoft.com...

> When I log onto www.nba.com/lakers, my normal select pointer is changed > from > the usual arrow to the McDonald's "M" logo and the link select pointer is > changed from the usual hand, with an extended index finger, to the Laker's > basketball logo. Can I do anything to stop this? It only happens on the > Lakers' web site and it only started about a week ago.

>