I read other posts on this subject. Some blame it on add ons or toolbars, but my hard drive was formatted and Internet Explorer was just installed with all updates including SP1.

I just wanted to point out that this is not an uncommon problem, it just takes months before people realize that it is common and just some glitch on their own computer, before you hear about it. It happens to everyone using IE6 trying to access my website www.meyersag.com

The website views perfectly fine with Netscape. I am guessing that it is some sort of malfunction between Publisher's html and IE6. This is not what one would expect when the software comes from the same company, but it is!

Let me know if there has been any resolution to this problem over the past number of months that complaints have been surfacing.

Let me know where to send the bill for wasted time trying to find a problem that has nothing to do with what I did.
