This is a recurrence of a problem I had before. Within certain pages of a specific website, links do not show up—they don't show up on the web page, and they don't show up when I try to "view source" (one specific page is www.fly.faa.gov/ois — the links are missing from the left-hand frame). In addition, on the page <http://www.fly.faa.gov/Products/products.html>, the 1st link (for advisories access database) is missing—all the other links show up.

I had received several suggestions from this forum before, that did not fix the problem: These steps included uninstalling & reinstalling Java, and running various Spywayre/Malware removal tools. I also posted a log to Hijack This forum, but no problems were found.

Finally, I ran Spybot S&D (for the 4th time)—and this time, it did find a "problem" that I fixed with Spybot. That problem was under "FCI" and it was called

"H_KEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\Software\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Uninstall\CONNECT\UninstallString"

The webpages in question "worked" until I used the "disk cleanup" function of Windows XP—and now the problem is back. (The first time the problem occurred was when I ran an IE Cache cleaning tool from my ISP, this tool is located at http://support.cox.com/sdcxuser/asp/cox_main.asp)

I tried running all the spyware/malware tools a couple of times (especially Spybot)—but again no problems are found. It seems like a coincidence that the problem surfaced twice after running 2 very similar procedures. Does anyone have any thoughts? I am running Windows XP SP2, and IE 6.0 PS2.

Thank you!
