

Re: 401 Unauthorized Question Again

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6.browser/2005-10/msg0016>

---

- From: "Charlie Tame" <charlie@xxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Wed, 5 Oct 2005 22:52:48 -0500
-

For some reason I have 2 versions of this but the later version is not on his website so I wrote the author asking why, I believe the version I have which does work on W2003 is written in assembler (it's 20k not 430k) and I think that is slightly different so if you want to simply "Reply" and put [personal] (including brackets) in the subject I will let you know what he says.

Charlie

"Alias" <Alias@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:049E65A1-F6F3-4A73-AE09-81DBCCEB492D@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx > Charlie,
>
> The IEZE sounds very interesting. And this thing about the Local Computer > Zone being there but invisible really has my curiosity peaked. Before > today
> I never heard of such a thing so i'm going to search for IEZE and check > out
> this invisible zone.
>
> Thanks for passing along that valuable info Charlie. I bet there are many > other power users out there who also have no knowledge about this. This > sounds like it's gonna be fun :-)
>
> -Alias
>
> "Alias" wrote:
>
>> Charlie,
>>
>> Thank you, thank you, thank you. It was actually located in the Trusted >> Zone
>> where the problem was found. It had been set to "Automatically logon with >> current username and password".
>>
>> You are the savior of my sanity. I had tried everything I knew short of >> uninstalling SP2 along with IE and re-installing everything again. You >> have

Re: 401 Unauthorized Question Again

>> saved me so much grief and headache. I really appreciate how you have >> helped >> me :-)
>>
>>
>> "Charlie Tame" wrote:
>>
>> > tools>internet options>security.
>> >
>> > Now in theory I guess this should be your Intranet zone but you could >> > check
>> > Internet too...
>> >
>> > Select the zone then custom button. At the bottom of settings check the >> > option that says Prompt for user name and password and see if