Thanks. That fixed it. That was a pain. Always opening a new window and having to resize it. I'll have to copy and save your instructions.

Hi,
Open a webpage. Stretch it out to fullsize. Don't use maximize.
Choose any link on that webpage and right-click> open in a new window.
Stretch that second window out to the desired size- don't use maximize.
Close the first IE window. Then close that second resized window.

To always get a true maximized window...
AutoSizer 1.4- <http://www.southbaypc.com/AutoSizer/>

Question about the internet explorer window size. When

Re: IE 7 Window Size

opening up a new browser window, it is small. I want to resize it and make it that size the next time new internet explorer window opens up. This small window only happens when, for example, I open up messenger and then am prompted that

I have new hotmail. the ie window opens up and that is when it is small.

it doesn't show the small window when I simply double click the ie icon on

desktop. I've tried to stretch the window, close it and then re-open

it.

that doesn't seem to work.

I am running XP MCE and IE 7.
