

Re: OE identities

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6_outlookexpress/2004-05/3

From: Birderman (birderman_at_removespamhotmail.com)

Date: 05/19/04

Date: Wed, 19 May 2004 10:13:39 +0100

Are you getting confused between identities and accounts ?

Each user apart from having separate identity will also require their own pop3 or hotmail email account. Then when the identity is logged in set the account to only include the pop3 or hotmail account applicable to that user. Log off the identity and then got the next identity and create the account for them. Note if you email addresses for each user are NOT individual pop3 accounts but Alias of the main email address then you will still have problems, each user needs their own Email Address Pop3 box on the server.

Alternately you can play with message rules and try filtering out the unwanted users from the logged in identity.....

HTH

Birderman

"Ray" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:d07401c439aa$cf0632d0$a101280a@phx.gbl...

> I'm running 4 Identities on OE 6 on XP Pro, it is a work- > share PC, we must all use the same Windows log-in.

>

> OE frequently confuses/merges the IDs. ie. try to log > into OE as Nick, but up pops what looks like Ray's inbox, > (his folders etc.) with both email intended for Nick and > email intended for Ray, but the account behaves like > Nick's, emails sent are sent as coming from 'Nick'.

>

> Any ideas please?!

>

> Thanks, Ray