First would be the question, where did you get your copy of XPSP2 since it has not been publicly released via Windows Update? Secondly, have you searched for all files ending with the extension of DBX? (In WinXP, the DBX files are hidden by the operating system so a search will have to use the Advanced Option to include searching for hidden files).

Post back with your results including the link where you got your copy. There are quite a few rogue sites out there that purport to offer a copy that may be infected.
