

Re: Uploading OE back up files

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6_outlookexpress/2005-02/0

From: Rob H (chew8_at_email.com)

Date: 01/31/05

Date: Mon, 31 Jan 2005 02:27:02 GMT

Sorry, I got confused and thought you meant create a new user 'Account' not identity and didn't follow your process (was tired and never had to create an identity before) My apologies to all for it taking the extra time and it shouldn't.

I don't think there was a 'faulty import' as I didn't try the import until after I originally set up the account and was having the problem. The corruption appears to have been from a faulty original OE install?

I'll proceed with the transfer of files to the new 'working' identity. I suppose when the transfer is complete it's just a matter of deleting the old and renaming the new identity back to 'Main' again?

Rob

" mac" <macknever@fsmail.net> wrote in message
news:usiWSoyBFHA.2608@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl...

>

> "Rob H" <chew8@nospam.com> wrote in message

> news:vleLd.178800$KO5.149817@clgrps13...

>

>> However, I think we're almost there because I just tried creating a new >> identity to see if there was any change, and voila, messages were received >> on the new Identity!

>> Does this provide a clue?

>

> Hi Rob, er? Hi Debra,

> 36 hours ago you where given that option.

>

> "Does this provide a clue"?

>

> Yes, the identity was corrupted by the faulty import.

> Regards Steve.

> MS-MVP. IE/OE.

>

>