

Adding background sound files

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.inetexplorer.ie6_outlookexpress/2005-02/1

From: Ron Hirsch (ronhirsch_at_adelphia.net)

Date: 02/05/05

Date: Sat, 5 Feb 2005 14:38:16 -0500

I tried adding a background file to a message today. I sent the initial messages to myself to confirm that it was working.

The window for adding files includes wma, wav, mp3, and mid. Wav is too big, so I tried mp3, then wma, and then mid.

The only one that worked was midi files. The received message for wma and mp3 had no sound file in it. I confirmed this by looking at the size of the sent files – they were 1k, so obviously no sound files included.

Why was the midi file only thing I could send? I didn't try wav, as even if it worked, it's too large a file.

In all cases, after presumably adding the sound file, they all played in the message to be sent, while it was still on screen, before I sent it

Ron Hirsch