Hi AlmostBob,

You helped me a lot! Thank you: my problems are solved. Eventually I use MS Word for the purpose: replacing texts are affected the least in this way: I don't need to redefine the font or other specialities in the original text: Word pump them over nicely if I select and copy/paste a paragraph into Word – edit the text in Word – copy/paste back to the still selected part in the HTML-formatted mail.

Again: many thanks!

align="left"
closing tags are not required for td tr, they are superseded by opening a new td or tr only /table is required
yes its ugly
but that table is presented not as an example of beautiful programming to w3 standards, but as an example of quick n dirty reformatting of text from one source to another

Oreo you and friend can change the default text of notepad2 to match the compose text for your OE

Is the : supposed to be in align="left" ?
Did you mean to leave off the closing TR and TD tags?

I use tables a lot, to align text, not the dumbass table generated by

page that are composed of emspaces and nobreak spaces (am going to leave off the leading <s of each line so this does not show
as
html, parts of my last post got rendered, oops)

html>
body bgcolor="#ecccc"> table width="100%">
Caption="This weeks totals">
!--repeat four lines below for each person-->
TR>
TD width="135" align="right">Name
TD width="135" align="right">Count
of page)
!--repeat four lines above for each person-->

Re: Two different kind of spaces

/body>

I like a free notepad replacement called notepad2, unlimited file size like
wordpad & changes the color of command syntax words so its easy to see if

you left out any closing brackets or quotes.
and cut the text out of incoming mails, paste them into notepad2 and reformat them, becuse I use

the same table a lot, really a lot, I have a template & cut n paste

Re: Two different kind of spaces

Hi AlmostBob,

Thank you for your
elaborate explanation.
Would it be advisable then to compose my tests first is,
say, Wordpad

adn

copy that into the mail that I want ot forward? Will that way guard

against unwanted nbsp-spaces? I would be grateful if you could suggest another

way,

if this is not the easiest way to get rid of these nbsp-spaces in my

texts!

Thank you in advance!
