

Re: MCE 2005 and Pinnacle Media Center 300i

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.mediacenter/2005-02/2411.html>

From: Curious (curious_at_like2.know)

Date: 02/13/05

Date: Sun, 13 Feb 2005 11:34:10 -0800

Nigel,

I agree that any product on the list is supported but it does not mean that a product not on the list is not supported. It only means that the vendor of the product had not submitted the product to MS for the logo qualification program.

Following is a quote from the beginning of the listing.

"

This is an initial list of compatible products. The list will grow as products get submitted into the logo program.

"

It certainly would be nice if the different groups at MS got in sync so that other products that they have qualified as working such as the HP and Xbox extender or WinDVD6 appeared instead of only the ones that the manufacturer paid them to list.

"Nigel Barker" <nigel@hp.com> wrote in message news:iocu01lng3ulcqnn1ftuh3mngu4oe2ial@4ax.com...

> On Sat, 12 Feb 2005 15:43:03 -0800, "Kerry Burn" <kerry.burn@nospam.net> > wrote:

>

>>Guys,

>>

>> a very quick question, has anyone managed to get the above DVB card >> working >>with MCE2005, i have it installed in a packard bell MCE from PC World and >>it

>>flat out refuses to tune in either analogue or digital under MCE.

>>

>>this is in addition to a Phillips DVB card that came with the unit, i >>should >>add that neither card works at the moment, i have tried it in two >>different >>locations and no joy on a digital signal.

>>

>>another trip to PCW stafford tomorrow!

>>

>>any thoughts would be greatly appreciated

>>

>>Kerry

>

> What made you think that this card _would_ work with MCE 2005? It's not on the > list of supported cards (mind you neither is your Philips card).

> <http://www.microsoft.com/windowsxp/mediacenter/partners/dfw/partnerlisting.msp>

>

> Evidently it does work as a quick Google finds postings on the XPMCE forum > stating that it works in MCE 2005 & pointers to the correct MCE2005 > drivers.

>

> --

> Nigel Barker

> Live from the sunny Cote d'Azur