I have been using the trial version of Nero Vision Express and agree with you that it does a lot with the media centre recorded files. However, the problem I have been having with it and which has put me off of buying the full version so far is that during the process of burning to a DVD it seems to stop working. I get no error messages at all. Last night I started it off and the initial part seemed to go fine but it got about 80% of the way through the burn process then stopped doing anything. I left it overnight but it hadn't progressed any further so I aborted it. The whole system then seems to slowly die and I have to switch off.

Any ideas?
