

Re: HDTV stuttering

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.mediacenter/2005-06/msg02055.html>

---

- From: "Curious" <curious@xxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Tue, 21 Jun 2005 17:05:00 -0700
-

You should use the 72.14 MCE drivers from the NVIDIA Website (suggest you also download the display users manual from the same download page), especially since these drivers support NVIDIA Pure video functionality when used with a 6600 card and the 1.0.67 DVD Decoder.

Your stuttering problem should be eliminated since the graphics processing power of the 6600 GT far exceeds that of the 9550.

"Dave" <Dave@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:0717B7B1-6A25-4701-A89A-E09B5843E048@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

>I have the following home-built MCE2005 system:

>

> Celeron D 2.8GHz

> 1GB DDR

> 250GB SATA HD

> Gigabyte ATi 9550-based video card (128MB)

> Hauppauge 500MCE dual-tuner card

> Avermedia AVerTVHD MCE A180 HD-OTA tuner card

> NVidia decoder 1.0.67 (or something like that)

>

> I was getting stuttering when viewing dynamic HD content, so I recently > purchased an Asus NVidia 6600 (not GT)-based board to take advantage of > Purevideo. Several questions about this setup:

> 1. Should I download the drivers from NVidia or Asus—I ask because I > couldn't find MCE specific drivers on the Asus website, but could on the > NVidia site. What's the difference in the drivers? If NVidia is the way > to > go, is there any particular version of Forceware I should steer clear of

> (as

> I found to be the case for some versions of ATi's ACatalyst software)?

> 2. What are the chances I'm going to fix my stuttering problem? I know > that requires some speculation...but if anyone feels I'm on the wrong > path,

> please tell me...and tell me why you think so.

>

> For the record, I did defrag my hard drive, and the problem did not go > away.

> Also, the entire system works fine for all other applications. Thanks.

>

> Dave

>

.

-
- Follow-Ups:
    - ◆ Re: HDTV stuttering
      - ◇ From: Pete Delgado

  - References:
    - ◆ HDTV stuttering
      - ◇ From: Dave

  - Prev by Date: Re: Fixing res