Right, because your recorded tv content wasn't flagged as copy-protected.

As I've already said, you can share recorded tv, video and pictures as long as they aren't marked as copy-protected; however, you cannot share the tuners (i.e. for sharing Live TV) over multiple MCE systems.

Hmm... I can watch the recorded .dvr-ms files on another PC without any problem.

Weird, I guess Legal department was smoking something.

Hmm, so I guess, the only way to do it would be to pick up a Media Center Extender for the PC I want to do with that... incredibly stupid... ugh.

Because the second PC doesn't have a license for the content (It's created on the first PC and saved with the content).

Don't want you saving the content and distributing it on DVD!

....and no, you can't save it on the first PC, copy it to DVD, then play it in the second PC. At least that's what the DRM zealots tell us.
