This is something we're addressing in Windows Vista (Extender support is built in, so we'll be able to update it via Windows Update if needed).

The first one fixed the issue, thanks Todd.

As an question, and it isn't your fault, Todd :), is, why doesn't Windows Update take care of issues like this? It's not the first thing I'd think of:

go to the XBox website to update the Media Center Extender program when you receive this error code... Just curious.

Double-checking – is this on a Linksys or HP MCX set top box? If so, have you installed the latest MCX PC-side software from www.xbox.com/pcsetup?

Re: Error Code 00110003 / Extender just stopped working!

Also, if you remove/re-add your MCX via the MCX Manager (Start --> All Programs --> Accessories --> Media Center --> Media Center Extender Manager), do you still see this issue?

Gladly. I'm glad someone from Microsoft is willing to listen (even if

there are no warranties or rights.. :). Note, I'm typing them onto a laptop

to send to the news group, so the spellings might be a little off.

Security: The Audit log was cleared... (This was done by me, prior to starting

extender up again..)

System:
Remote Media Center session was logged off because system validation

failed.

Re: Error Code 00110003 / Extender just stopped working!

As I mentioned previously, I did not install anything at all to my knowledge from the time it lasted worked, to the time it failed. There was a window of about 3 hours that I know of from the time I know it worked,

to the time it failed. I did reboot the PC during that window. Perhaps

there was some Microsoft update that was waiting to install? I do have Automatic Updates installed.

Any informaiton you could possibily give me would be most welcome, Todd.

Please check the Application, System, and Security Event Viewer logs (right click My Computer --> Manage) for any errors corresponding to the time

that you tried to connect and then post them here.

Wow. That absolutely stinks... I wonder why it chose to break now,

not

later. Maybe my PC wasn't rebooted since then.

Does anyone have an ETA on a fix for this? I'd hate to re-format my
PC,
although it's starting to need it.
