Well, I guess others think I am wrong here, but I believe those searches are part of 'forms', so uncheck everything else.

Tom Scales, when I followed your advice, I ran into the following problem:
After going to autocomplete, the options were 'web addresses', which was already checked, 'user names on passwords and forms', which was already checked, 'prompt me to save passwords', which was already checked, and 'forms', which was unchecked. What was I supposed to do at this point? I can either choose 'ok' or 'cancel'.

folders'
be searched. Later, when I wished to begin a new search, the old
keyword popped up. I'd like to delete
the old keyword, so it doesn't pop up
every time I initiate a new search.
How do I do this?

Bring up Internet Explorer.

Go to Tools, Options.

Content Tab

Click Autocomplete

Click Clear

OK out.

Should do it.

WAY too much work...

Just highlight the item in the dropdown list and CTRL-DEL
on the keyboard.

Do delete THAT one. Mine deleted them ALL
