

RE: copied music cd's have a skip in last 18 seconds

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.mediacenter/2007-12/msg00336.html>

- From: xiowan <xiowan@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 12 Dec 2007 20:44:01 -0800
-

Hello again "kragor":

I wasn't able to find the post about your problem in this newsgroup or on google. If installing all missing Windows Updates doesn't fix your problem you could try right clicking the speaker icon in the taskbar, click properties, select "enhancements", and try "disable all enhancements" and see if that solves the problem. I'm sorry my memory isn't better. I can't remember exactly what the cure was but, it was a change in the sound parameters. Another possibility would be to update your audio codecs to the latest version. Hopefully someone else can help you better. Good luck!

xiowan.....in tucson

"xiowan" wrote:

Hello "kragor":

I ran into the same problem several months ago and found a solution in this forum. I can't remember what it was and will try to find post that remedied the problem. I do not believe it was DRM related. I have since re-installed the Media Center 2005 O.S. and didn't have to apply the solution so I'm guessing that if you have all the Windows updates, including "optional software" that would solve the problem. You might try going to windows update and checking that you have all the available updates. If I find the post on fixing the problem I'll post it here.

xiowan.....in tucson

"kragor" wrote:

Every music cd I burn (that I own) to my computer has a skip, or like a "blank", spot around the last 18 seconds or so of every song I have put on my hard drive. What's up with this?

RE: copied music cd's have a skip in last 18 seconds