

Re: migration NT --> AD 2003

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.active\_directory/2004-10/1219.html

---

From: Andy Barkl [MVP] (abarkl\_at\_community.nospam)

Date: 10/18/04

Date: Mon, 18 Oct 2004 11:39:42 -0700

"motila" <motila@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:FB3D1673-5D97-47C3-B145-AB6F04ABC4BA@microsoft.com...
> I have a NT domain and i have on charge the migration to Windows 2003 AD.
> The > actual netbios domain name is cobon
> I want to build a new AD with an other name : medio.local
> I can't use a new address plan. My actual network is 192.168.1.0/24.
> So the question is : Can I have the PDC and the BDC (Wins too) with the > addresses 192.168.1.1 and .2 and build a new AD domain with 192.168.1.100 > et
> .101 for the new DCs. After, i would like migratte accounts and delete the > old domain.
> Is it possible to have 2 domains in the same network and what find of > problem can I meet with this?
> Thanks for your help.

As long as you don't use the same NetBIOS domain name cobon for the new Windows 2003 domain, you shouldn't have any problems during the migration scenario you have described.