

Re: Domain Trusts and LDAP

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.active\_directory/2005-01/0915.html

---

From: GMartin (gmartin_at_gmartin.org)

Date: 01/14/05

Date: Thu, 13 Jan 2005 22:39:15 -0500

To: "Chriss3 [MVP]" <noSpamHere@chrisse.se>

Chriss3 [MVP] wrote:

> Another solution may could be to use ADAM (Active Directory in Application > Mode) for the web application, and create ProxyUser Accounts that relays to > an Account in the Active Directory but thats not really secure.

>

> For security reasons I recommend you to use IIFP Identify Integration > Feature Pack for synchronize accounts between the external and internal > domain. Trusting Domains/Forests are not secure. IIFP is free as long you > have a copy of Windows Server 2003

>

I'm not really interested in copying our internal credentials out to the DMZ. Seems risky. I was considering doing all of the trust communications over IPSEC with direct holes through the firewall or maybe using ISA to proxy the connction.

\\Greg