

Re: Assigning domain users rights to change ip address

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.active_directory/2005-04/msg00213

- From: "yasir" <yasir@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 1 Apr 2005 05:45:02 -0800
-

hi I have tried to do so but power user also dose not have rights to change the password

"Al Mulnick" wrote:

- > I would think that is correct, but I have to wonder why somebody would
- > hesitate to configure a user as a local admin but not as a power user.
- >
- > For reference, here's a list of the rights as they are by default on the
- > local machine for server
- >
- > <http://www.microsoft.com/technet/prodtechnol/windowsserver2003/library/ServerHelp/b93ed1f7-7ed0-457e-956a-2>
- >
- > and for XP
- >
- > http://www.microsoft.com/resources/documentation/windows/xp/all/proddocs/en-us/sag_seconceptsunprivs.msp
- >
- > Placing domain users into the local Power Users group would likely do what
- > you want without giving so much away on the DC's.
- >
- > Keep in mind that changing an IP address is a big deal and should require
- > elevated privileges. The same way that time should require additional
- > rights.
- >
- > Al
- >
- > "Mike Brannigan [MSFT]" <mikebran@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
- > news:ejhQokrNFHA.2588@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
- > > "yasir" <yasir@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
- > > news:794B0B07-114E-4F97-A681-321D530AE398@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
- > >> hello
- > >> I am working in a cisco lab where domain users required to change their
- > >> PC's
- > >> IP address frequently according to the lab requirement but the problem is
- > >> that domain users don't have a right to do so and if we add them in
- > >> administrators group they will gain full access,please help so, domain
- > >> user

Re: Assigning domain users rights to change ip address

>>> could gain a right to change ip setting through network connection.
>>> thank you
>>
>> From memory a Power User g