

microsoft.public.windows.server.general: "Some files could harm..." whenever I click on a VB script

"Some files could harm..." whenever I click on a VB script

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.general/2004-05/1596.html>

From: Michael A. Covington (look_at_www.ai.uga.edu.for.information)

Date: 05/18/04

Date: Tue, 18 May 2004 14:49:24 -0400

Since upgrading to Windows Server 2003, I get the warning "Some files could harm your computer..." whenever I click on a shortcut VBSCRIPT file that resides on a different server.

These include my main administrative scripts.

How can I turn this warning off, without lowering the level of security for everyone else?