

RE: Access Based Directory Enumeration

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.general/2005-06/msg01464.html>

- From: Manny Borges <MannyBorges@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 17 Jun 2005 08:12:06 -0700
-

Great question!

>From what your tests have shown (in my opinion)this is a totally useless tool. Who is logging into a 2003 console? Admins.

Who do we really want to filter...ummm, users?

I mean I can see the value of filtering the views to files so that potato head admins and password resetters can't mess with things, but thats a minor need.

"MF" wrote:

> Hi all,
>
>
>
> MS has published a long awaited tool for win03 server sp1 – access based > directory enumeration.
>
>
>
> The white paper goes 'ABE filters shared folders visible to a user based on > that individual user's access rights, preventing the display of folders or > other shared resources that the user does not have rights to access.' As I > understand it, the shared folders should not be visible to users if they > have not the proper rights.
>
>
>
> I have installed the tool and it does filter folders if a user has no right > to access. But it does not filter shares! This is disappointing, because > filtering shares would be much more useful. Is this by design?
>
>
>
> Thank you,
>

> Martin

>

>

>

.

• References:

◆ Access Based Directory Enumeration

◇ From: MF

• Prev by Date: RE: Server 2k starts beeping then hangs up...

• Next by Date: Re: NT backup and logging out

• Previous by thread: Access Based Directory Enumeration

• Next by thread: Re: Very slow startup process after installing W2003 SP1 on DC's

• Index(es):

◆ Date

◆ Thread