Look for a post tomorrow mornig, I will go thru step by step so that you can understnad hwat I did and how I did it. You might be right that I overlooked
a step someplace, so lets regroup tomorrow?

I think you are not doing it correctly or I am misunderstanding. You go to the folders NTFS permissions. There you add your group and grant them Modify. Click on advance and select the group then click on Edit. there you
deny the permissions that were applied on the previous window.

in the ntfs permissions the group already had modify adn
then there is an entry under that with read, write and execute. BOth entried have denied permissions for delete etc. Still not working right.....(sigh)

I can not figure this out and can not find anyone who can answer so
here
I
am
asking for some help.

I have a folder on my server that will contain information scanned
and
saved
– the original documents will then be shredded. I have a security
group
that will have access to this folder. I want them to be able to save the documents to the folder but not to move or delete them.

I set up the folder permissions for everyone to have full control
under sharing and security, under security I have added my group and set
them
as follows: everything except

Re: folder permissions

full control, under the advanced I edited
this
group to not allow delete,
move or take ownership
etc. By playing
with these settings I can either get them to save (and consequently delete)
or not delete (and consequently not save). I can not get the correct
settings
for
save but no delete.

Can this be done and can someone tell me the precise steps I need to do
this?

Thanks in advance.
