

Re: How to kick a user off the network

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.networking/2004-06/0617.html>

---

From: Oli Restorick [MVP] (oli_at_mvps.org)

Date: 06/12/04

Date: Sat, 12 Jun 2004 22:59:05 +0100

However, if the machine's infected, you'll want to shut down rather than reboot, so use pssshutdown from the same place.

Regards

Oli

"Oli Restorick [MVP]" <oli@mvps.org> wrote in message
news:e$fe9vKUEHA.3332@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...

> Hi Karl

>

> If you know the computer name or IP address of the machine(s) the user is > logged in on, you can use pskill (part of PStools from > www.sysinternals.com) to remotely kill the winlogon.exe process.

>

> This will cause the machine to reboot.

>

> Regards

>

> Oli

>

>

>

> "Karl" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message > news:1b4ec01c44fc6$adc90d90$a401280a@phx.gbl...

>> *I need to know how to kick a user off the network, I know
>> I can disconnect a user through Active Directory, but that >> doesn't get a immediate reaction. I am running a Windows >> 2003 server platform with mainly XP clients. I had a user >> who brought a virus into the network through his computer, >> when I told him to shut down, he didn't do it immediately.*

>

>