

Re: 2003 Server in NT Domain?

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.networking/2004-06/0849.html>

From: Steve W (antispamsteveW_at_=No-Spam=.org)

Date: 06/20/04

Date: Sun, 20 Jun 2004 22:25:22 +0100

Thank you, Mike.

That is useful. Can you recommend a book or other resource so I could learn more about What we've just been discussing?

Regards
SteveW

"Miha Pihler" <mihap-news@atlantis.si> wrote in message
news:ujWQdrtVEHA.716@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...

> Hi Steve,

>

>

>

> for DC I would always recommend a separate server (actually two). My reasons > are:

>

>

>

>  security (why would I allow users to run applications on my DC)*

>

>  performance (if applications that runs on DC cause a lot processor stress,* > users could get slow logon and authentication responses)

>

>  restore time (depending on applications that you run on your server it could prolong disaster recover time)*

>

> ** ...*

>

>

>

> Services that I usually allow to run on DC are DHCP service, DNS service (obvious) and print service (print server)

>

>

>
> I hope this helps you out,
>
>
>
> Mike
>
>
> "Steve W" <antispamsteveW@=No-Spam=.org> wrote in message
> news:uk6FbksVEHA.808@tk2msftngp13.phx.gbl...
>> Hi,
>>
>> When its installed, no, it won't be a domain controller. However, later >> on,
>> when I retire the PDC and BDC, I don't know what path to take.
>> I don't know if I should then make the new server a DC, or one of the >> W2000
>> servers. What would you advise?
>>
>> Regards
>> Steve
>>
>> "Miha Pihler" <mihap-news@atlantis.si> wrote in message
>> news:%232cHaYqVEHA.3336@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...
>>> Hi Steve,
>>>
>>> With information that you gave us, it's really hard to say anything >>> useful.
>>> If your new Windows 2003 server won't be a domain controller (DC) then
>>> you >>> shouldn't have any problems later on when you upgrade your domain...
>>>
>>> Mike
>>>
>>> "Steve W" <antispamsteveW@=No-Spam=.org> wrote in message
>>> news:eestyMpVEHA.3664@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...
>>>> Hi,
>>>>
>>>> I have an NT Domain (One PDC, one BDC) with 5 W2000
application/member >>>> servers. I need to buy a new application server. I'd like to install >> 2003
>>>> Server so I won't have to upgrade it when the Domain is finally >> upgraded.
>>>> Is this a viable proposition? What should I do so I don't have to make >> any
>>>> mods when the domain is upgraded?
>>>>
>>>> Thanks,
>>>> SteveW

microsoft.public.windows.server.networking: Re: 2003 Server in NT Domain?

> >> >
> >> >
> >>
> >>
> >
> >
>
>