

Re: Network configuration question

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.networking/2004-09/0533.html>

From: Robert L [MS-MVP] (noreply_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 09/14/04

Date: Tue, 14 Sep 2004 10:11:14 -0500

this is routing issue. depends on the router/firewall connecting both sites, you may need to modify the routing table.

--

For more and other information, go to <http://www.ChicagoTech.net>
Don't send e-mail or reply to me except you need consulting services.
Posting on MS newsgroup will benefit all readers and you may get more help.
Robert Lin, MS-MVP, MCSE & CNE
Networking, Internet, Routing, VPN, Anti-Virus, Tips & Troubleshooting on <http://www.ChicagoTech.net>

This posting is provided "AS IS" with no warranties.

"PC" <paulm DOT c at iol DOT ie> wrote in message
news:enOHX4jmEHA.2140@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...

> Hi,

>

> Our company is in the process of integrating with some members of another > company. There will be about 10 new users who initially will need to > access

> resources on their own network and access my network.

>

> Currently my network consists of a single windows 2000 domain with all > clients / servers on the same subnet. I'm looking for some advise as to > the > best way to connect the new users to both my network and their own (They > are > only moving across the city so a leased line is probably the way to go)

>

> The way I see it (any I hope you will correct me if I'm wrong) is as > follows:

>

> My network remains as is on say 192.168.1.0 subnet. Add one router to > forward traffic from the new users to my network. Place them in a > different > subnet e.g 192.168.2.0. Then add one more router and route traffic via > leased line to and from the new users old network through this (e.g. To > subnet 10.0.0.0)

>

> Some questions:

> 1. How do I configure the clients on both mine and the new user networks.
> i.e. currently the default gateway for my clients is the internet > firewall.

> The new users will probably use their own network resources initially so I > would imagine their default gateway will be the router connecting them to > thier own network. How do I allow communication between me and the new > staff

microsoft.public.windows.server.networking: Re: Network configuration question > and the new staff and their own network

> 2. Would there be any point in creating a child domain for the new staff > and > creating trusts between each of the networks?
>
>
> Any advise greatly appreciated
>
> ..pc
>
>
>