

Re: SBS2003 group policy problem

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.sbs/2004-10/6480.html>

---

From: JohnB (johnbsgenerator\_at\_hotmail.com)

Date: 10/26/04

Date: Tue, 26 Oct 2004 06:55:15 GMT

Sounds like the issue mentioned in this article, but you indicate that this is a Windows 2000 pro box which should not have the problem described in this article:

How to prevent Windows from storing a LAN manager hash of your password in Active Directory and local SAM databases
<http://support.microsoft.com/?id=299656>

This article might shed some light on your issue:

Client, service, and program incompatibilities that may occur when you modify security settings and user rights assignments
<http://support.microsoft.com/?id=823659>

--

```
John Behneman
a-johnbe@online.mcirosoft.com ("John Behneman (MSFT)")
"Dman" <Dman@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message
news:EEF572E2-35D3-4FCF-AF62-4CA340DF12E5@microsoft.com...
> Anyone have any thoughts? Need more info???
>
> "Dman" wrote:
>
>> I am having problems with the first workstation logging on to the >> network!!!
>> I setup the users and machines during the initial setup of the server and >> i >> then went to the 2k pro box and went to >> http:\\servername\connectcomputer....no problems ..it asked me if i >> wanted to >> add the machine and user to the network..(I had already created >> themachine
>> name during setup fo the server) I added myself to the local admin >> account...It went to reboot to finish the account and then after reseting
>> the >> pass at the server many times and giving the user and domain users and >> myself >> permissions to change passwords and the sbs wont let me logon.....If I >> set >> the pass to be changed at next logon, it will accept the pass that i >> setup at >> the server and askes for new pass. When I try to enter a new pass.... it >> says
```

microsoft.public.windows.server.sbs: Re: SBS2003 group policy problem

>> the I dont have sufficient rights to cahnge my pass????
>> Ay help greatly appreciated.
>> D