That kernel_apc error looks like a device driver. I'd check to make sure all your drivers are WS03-compatible and current. If given the opportunity, when the system reboots after the bluescreen, do the "send error report" thing and see if MS can sort it out for you. I don't know specifically where you'd be best off starting, but if your MB uses an Intel chipset, there's an update for SATA on the Intel site – my XP box was bluescreening from that one. Also, video's always a good bet. You could try searching that error on the manufacturers' support sites to see if you get anything.

As for the rdbss.sys, try searching support.microsoft.com for that file name – you might come up with something. Here's one possibility <http://support.microsoft.com/default.aspx?scid=kb:en-us:890554>
