

RE: Permissions on Sharepoint Calendar Event Entries

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.sbs/2005-05/msg03634.html>

- From: "Steve" <Steve@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 16 May 2005 11:47:34 -0700
-

Never mind. I figured it out. Just had to take the time and look a little closer.

"Steve" wrote:

- > I understand that permissions can be set for the entire Calendar, but would
 - > like to know if there is a permission setting at Event level, where only the
 - > creator or administrator can delete the individual Event.
 - >
 - > One user was entering and maintaining occurrences and logs for particular
 - > events, sharing these with another user. The reading user reads the entries
 - > and takes appropriate action, can add notes to the entry, but someone else
 - > came along and decided that it wasn't necessary to maintain expired events
 - > and deleted almost 6 months worth of events. The creator was devastated
 - > because she needs the entries for research, status and reporting purposes.
 - > The reader is now informed not to delete the entries, but in today's world of
 - > high employee turnover, lower wages, lower moral and higher productivity
 - > expectations and stress levels it will end up happening again. I need to
 - > prevent this from happening.
 - >
 - >
 - .
-

• References:

- ◆ Permissions on Sharepoint Calendar Event Entries
◇ From: Steve

- Prev by Date: RE: Backup Log Links dont work in Server Management Console
- Next by Date: RE: Backup Exec v10 can't access mailboxes
- Previous by thread: Permissions on Sharepoint Calendar Event Entries
- Next by thread: An Update on Trend HotFix Update Issue!!
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date

RE: Permissions on Sharepoint Calendar Event Entries

◆ Thread