...include the automatic creation of a robots.txt file or META tags during IIS setup to disallow search engine robots, so that a simple Google or Yahoo query for "Remote Web Workplace" or "Welcome to Windows Small Business Server 2003" wouldn't reveal all these companies SBSs? Or should it not be a concern? Yeah, yeah, "best practice" "strong passwords", like THAT happens. Seems to me that the leet haxorz should have to work a little harder than 'that'.
