Okay thanks for all of the input...

I did make alot of progress. However, I couldn't get the client to connect to the server through the "<http://sbs/connectcomputer> method. I did, however get connected to the DC through the network setup wizard on the client. When it logged onto the domain, the client had an icon to "install outlook". When I clicked on it, it came up with the product key window. What did I do wrong?

A little background is this...

I'm using virtual pc 2007 for both the server and the client. for the first time EVER, I got the internet to work on the server with 2 NIC's after running CEICW. I added the client PC and the user using the wizards. when I did this... <http://sbs/connectcomputer> , i got an error something to the effect of set DNS in the router to the ip of the server. so I chose to join the domain using the clients network wizard. This is just a lab setup and I don't want to change router to do DNS at this point. I'm just trying to get through all of these wizards and get a feel for what a SBS2003 properly installed is like.

I am very impressed that when the clients connect, software can be installed automatically. I didn't know that.

My main push is I have one of these boxes going into a 15 client network next week and would like to impress my customer. I've installed 3 other SBS servers this year and the results were lame. He now has a XP peer network and has finally opted to get a server. I also have a service contract with our local county and one of my goals in 2007 is to get the 70-282 certificate. the training is led by microsoft and is on jan 12. I'm trying over this christmas break to get a better foundation on this.

As others has often said, I don't have any problems installing and configuring server 2003. just these SBS servers.

Thanks again for all of the input.

Hi Jim.

Thank you for posting here.

From the description, I understand you want to install only outlook 2003 SP2 on your computer and want to know where the product key is on your SBS2003 R2 DVD. If I am off base, please don't hesitate to let me know.

Base on my knowledge, the only way to install Outlook 2003 SP2 on a single computer from SBS 2003 R2 DVD is through deployment of the SBS server. I completed understand your situation, but windows SBS 2003 R2 is designed for a business solution, not for personal need. The goal of design is provide a convenient way for a business environment. We don't have a method to install Outlook 2003 SP2 in a separate computer without any Server involved, so we don't provide Outlook 2003 product key on the DVD.

I appreciate your understanding, I am happy to be of assistance to you and look forward to your reply.

Have a nice day!

Best regards,

Inn Jin (MSFT)
