Your XP wireless network would not connect to an 802.11b WAP with WEP shared key.

If I have misunderstood your concerns please feel free to let me know.

Yes; the 802.11b was the second in the list of preferred networks defined by Group policy. The first WAP was not accepting connections due to a RADIUS misconfiguration, but XP would only attempt to connect to the 802.11g WAP, which it could not do.
