If you could elaborate as to exactly how to install the Admin Tools to a different folder I would be very appreciative.

I'm having the same problem with the admin tools after performing in place upgrades on Windows 2000 servers, and as far as I can tell, the Adminpak.msi installer package does not give the option to install to any location other than default.

KB article said that installation problems with W2K3 Admin Tools after an in place upgrade are a known issue, and that the fix was to run ADMINPAK.MSI from the System 32 directory, as opposed to the running it from the CD. This worked on some of the upgraded machines, but not on all.

For the one on which it didn't work, I can now neither uninstall the W2K Admin Tools, nor install the W2K3 Admin Tools. Can't go back. Can't go forward.

Any help would be appreciated.
