

microsoft.public.windows.server.setup: Re: Thank you very much you really helped me a lot. :D

Re: Thank you very much you really helped me a lot. :D

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windows.server.setup/2005-03/0439.html>

From: Jorge Patricio Díaz Guzmán (jdiaz_at_poch.cl)

Date: 03/24/05

Date: Thu, 24 Mar 2005 10:07:46 -0400

You are welcome :)

--

Jorge Patricio Díaz Guzmán

MCP

"joe" <joe@discussions.microsoft.com> escribió en el mensaje

news:A6756E2B-550D-4947-8CB3-671DE3B195A9@microsoft.com...

> Thank you very much you really helped me a lot. :D, exactly what i was > looking for thanks for the link.

>

> "joe" wrote:

>

>> Hi all,

>> How do i reset all my security settings back to default?(in the domain >> security)

>>

>> I have installed windows 2003 now about 5 times, and i have noticed not >> everthing is the same when installing, even if its on the same machinese

>> i >> installed it on just1 month earlier. I installed windows 2003 the >> otherday

>> and when i set up my roaming profiles i discovered from my local machine

>> i

>> wasnt able to see everything within a web page, i checked security

>> settings

>> and it found my settings were set to high security which it would NOT let >> me

>> change and it was not because i didnt have permissions, when i checked the >> local domain policy on the server i found all kinds of security policies

>> had >> been defined and they are all greyed in so i cant change them, bear in >> mind i >> just installed 2003 and not set any of these permissions. How do i get >> them

>> back to default?

>>

>> sinerely

>>

>> joe

Re: Thank you very much you really helped me a lot. :D