

Re: Yesterdays update

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windowsupdate/2005-02/1838.html>

From: CJ (CJ_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 02/12/05

Date: Fri, 11 Feb 2005 21:31:07 -0800

This I what I do for fun is fix these type of problems for people, Usually will take less than a half hour. I suggest you Start giving detailed info and possible find another way to communicate with each other. I can definately help you fix this but not in this forum. Im not sure about there rules. What you have is an issue with a running process, possible spyware we will have to look at the task manager and see wats going on .

"rsf" wrote:

- > For what it's worth, I tried restoring my computer to a pre-update
- > configuration (February 7) to see if it made any difference in the way
- > VirusScan runs. It didn't seem to. The CPU usage fluctuated but was still
- > around 90%. Does this rule out cause and effect between high CPU usage and
- > the latest Microsoft updates?
- >
- > "CJ" wrote:
- >
- >> Hey if it was truly a problem after installing updates , Go to system restore
- >> and restore system back to prior updates and see what happens
- >>
- >> "Rick" wrote:
- >>
- >>> Well its been another day of working on this machine only to get nowhere, I
- >>> have tried everything i can think of and still the machine is running
- >>> extremely slow, every time the small thing happens on the machine such as
- >>> outlook checking for new mail the CPU usage is @ 100% and just hangs there. I
- >>> thought it might be an Outlook issue so I ran a repair to outlook and still
- >>> the same issues. I was ready to do a reinstall of the OS only to find out I
- >>> cannot because the OS on the computer is newer then the disc (well no
- >>> kidding) Windoes will not let me install.
- >>>
- >>> I also have gone through and uninstalled all the updates from yesterday and
- >>> that didnt help either but this problem started at the EXACT same time I
- >>> installed the updates yesterday.
- >>>
- >>> I have never had a problem on a PC like this and I thought I had seen them
- >>> all, someone anyone please help!
- >>>
- >>>

microsoft.public.windowsupdate: Re: Yesterdays update

> > > Thank you!
> > >
> > > "rsf" wrote:
> > >
> > > > I'm now seeing the same high CPU usage (50 to 100%) when running virus > > > > checkers (McAfee VirusScan 7, Spybot, Yahoo AntiSpy, McAfee AntiSpyware), and > > > > sometimes while trying to change webpages in Internet Explorer.
> > > >
> > > > Here are the updates that were automatically installed yesterday:
> > > >
> > > > Windows Malicious Software Removal Tool – February 2005 (KB890830)
> > > > Successful Wednesday, February 09, 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows XP (KB885250) Successful Wednesday, February 09,
> > > > 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows XP (KB888113) Successful Wednesday, February 09,
> > > > 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows Messenger (KB887472) Successful Wednesday,
> > > > February 09, 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows XP (KB891781) Successful Wednesday, February 09,
> > > > 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Cumulative Security Update for Internet Explorer for Windows XP (KB867282)
> > > > Successful Wednesday, February 09, 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows XP (KB873333) Successful Wednesday, February 09,
> > > > 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows XP (KB890047) Successful Wednesday, February 09,
> > > > 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > > Security Update for Windows XP (KB888302) Successful Wednesday, February 09, > > > > 2005 Automatic Updates
> > > >
> > > > /rsf
> > > >
> > > > "id" wrote:
> > > >
> > > > > At the the top of the Add/Remove Programs window there is now a check box to > > > > > select to view Windows > > > > > updates.
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >