

Re: Auto updates service will not start

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Windows/microsoft.public.windowsupdate/2005-08/msg03403.html>

- From: "bcamp" <bcamp@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 22 Aug 2005 13:04:03 -0700
-

Thanks for the help. It turns out that the cabinet.dll was missing from the system32 dir. I copied it over, rebooted and everything works.

Thanks again for your help.

"Robert Aldwinckle" wrote:

> "bcamp" <bcamp@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
> news:5D61D3C8-F794-4F7B-B601-B437564BDDF1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
>> I've got a windows xp sp2 computer I am trying to update using windows >> update. When I go out to windows update after the initial screen I get >> 0x8ddd0004 error.
>> I tried re-registering the dll's. When I try to re-reg wuaueng.dll, REGSVR32
>> C:\WINDOWS\system32\wuaueng.dll , I get an error saying it cannot find it.
>> I checked and it is in that directory.
>
>
> Is that the exact text of the message or just your interpretation of it?
> A different but similar message could mean that some dependent modules > of the module being registered can't be found. In that case you could try > using DependencyWalker's Profiling feature to monitor the execution > of that regsvr32.exe command for better clues about what may be > missing.
>
>
>> I've cleaned out the temp internet files. Checked the firewall and turned it >> off to get that out of the way. I've check the security setting. Clear the >> cache. I have gone through just about everything. Not sure what to try next.
>>
>> In the event viewer I get a event id 7022 automatic updates services hung.
>
>
> In a cmd window enter (for clues):
>
> sc queryx wuauerv
>
>
> Try booting in safe mode to do your regsvr32.exe commands?

