Hello,

Since I re-installed my Windows XP home,

Re-installed how? Which version? E.g. base or XPsp2?
If the latter you probably don't need the update you are trying to install and in that case the error message would probably be bogus.

That update was a sort of a bootstrap for XPsp1 users to install BITS for WUv5 so they could download and install XPsp2.

I receive the "file corrupt" message everytime I try to install the "Update for Background Intelligent Transfer Service... KB842773" from either Windows Update or with manually downloading at <http://www.microsoft.com/downloads/details.aspx?familyid=b93356b1-ba43-480f-983d-eb19368f9047&dis>

I also did try the below actions : ---->

1. Stopping "Automatic Update Service" by typing "services.msc" in the run box.
2. Deleting the contents of both the DataStore, EventCache and Download folders in my SoftwareDistribution folder. (Cleaning out the Download folder for WU5)

If you are already using WUv5 my guess is that you already have the necessary version of BITS installed (if not also active) and don't need that update.

Re: File Corrupt – KB842773 (BITS)

3. Starting "Automatic Update Service" by typing "services.msc" in the run box.

It didn't work. I still receive "file corrupt" message when I try to install KB842773. That also stops me proceeding to SP2 I think or other necessary updates!!!?

Any help would really be appreciated.
Thanks

Well, what versions of the modules that the update documents do you have installed now?

A simple way of checking and doing other diagnostics for BITS as well would be to run (in a cmd window):

bitsadmin /util /version /verbose

Good luck
