Tonys I have exactly the same problem allbeit 80 critical updates will not install after taking out and reinstalling Service Pack 2. Have you found the answer, any help would be much appreciated as I don't seem to receive a reply from Microsoft.

I have recently had to re-install (update only not clean install) my Windows XP SP2 PC. I have turned on Automatic updates and got offered 79 critical updates.

I followed the process and let XP install all of the updates. Quite a few of the updates (about 20) were reported as not install. After reboot and the completion of the update install for those that reported as installing OK I again selected the remaining updates.

The process repeated with most but not all of the remaining ones being installed. I again rebooted and repeated the procedure for the remainder. However at the end of the last lot Windows Update proposes all of the updates for installation again.

I went to the MS update site and had it scan and propose what needed to be updated. This also suggested a very large list (I assume the same 79 as originally). I let it install/attempt from there but that has not helped.

I am now getting offered all 79 updates again.

Can anyone suggest how I can fix this. I know I could just tell Live Update to ignore these but I am not sure if they have actually installed correctly or not.

Cheers
