Thank you, TaurArian! I checked the Windowsupdate.log after reading the Microsoft article, and it showed activity (of some sort) at the time I was trying to download and then again a couple hours later. Still nothing downloaded, however, as far as I can tell.

I'm not sure what to do at this point. I'm going to have the computer turned off for a couple weeks after tomorrow and don't know if I should try to manually download the latest updates or let it go until I get back to it, at which time there'll no doubt be more updates.

I guess I'll wait til tomorrow to see what happens.

Do you think it would be worthwhile to leave the computer on overnight?

Thank you again!

Jo-Anne

Updates are not downloaded or the ?Automatic Updates? icon does not display the status of downloads when you enable the Automatic Updates service <http://www.support.microsoft.com/kb/910340>

During periods of heavy download traffic, the Automatic Updates service can reschedule download requests on a day-to-day basis. This rescheduling can occur over several days.
