"That path is Documents and Setting/Jim/Local Settings/Temporary Internet Files/OLKB. However, in Temporary Internet Files there is no OLKB or anything like it." (this is the default temp for files opened in MS IE or OE. Netscape and others use a different location.

Depending upon how you have the settings for both Internet Explorer and Windows Explorer?

These types of files may not show "IF" you do not have Windows Explorer set to "Show Hidden Files and Folders."

Internet Explorer has a setting where "Temp files" may be deleted upon closing. It's not the default however many people use it.

Open Windows Explorer

C:\Documents and Settings\username\Local Settings\Temporary Internet Files

Tools

Folder Options

View

Scroll down to the 10th line and tick/check "Show Hidden Files and Folders"

Ok yourself out and refresh screen (F5)

If you haven't or don't clean this folder regularly, it is possible to have THOUSANDS and THOUSANDS of files there.

And the task of finding the one you desire could be daunting. If, that's so you might try sorting them by date or name or file type to enhance your view.
