Hi KyMadDog

When I copy text from Word 2007 and paste it into another application, such as an e-mail program used at work, I get long lines of nonsense before and after the text. It usually starts with a URL before, like "<http://schemas.microsoft.com/office/word/2003/wordml2450>, and long lines of numbers and random words afterwards. What's this, and how do I stop it?

whenever you copy something to the clipboard, there's more than one "view" available in there on the copied content. The receiving (pasting) application is responsible for a selection. In Office, you can for instance use Paste Special and select which "view" you want to paste. I'd look for such an option in this email application of yours.
