What did you put in the header? A (wrapped) picture or just text?

I have created a multiple page Word 2007 document without any page or sections breaks. I then create a page 1 header by selecting the 'Different First Page' option in headers/footers. I then added our company name to page 1 header and page numbers to subsequent page headers. I save the document (my cursor is on page 1).

When I open the document, it opens to page 2 and puts my cursor at the beginning of the page. Is this a quirk in Word 2007?

If I put a Section break at the top of my document, save and re-open; my cursor is at the beginning of the first page.

I have not been able to find any information anywhere on this "feature".
